Abstract of the Bengal Maternity Benefit Act, 1939, and rules framed thereunder.

[Rule 11 of the Bengal Maternity Benefit Rules, 1940.]

1. Under the Maternity Benefit Act, 1939, every woman employed in a factory for a period not less than nine months immediately preceding the date of her delivery is entitled to receive from her employer maternity benefit at the rate of her average daily wages or eight annas a day, whichever is greater, for a period of eight weeks at every childbirth, i.e., four weeks immediately preceding and four weeks immediately following the child birth.

2. Every pregnant woman should give notice to the manager of her expectation of confinement within one month. If such notice is not given before the birth of a child, it must be given within seven days of its birth. The notice may be given either orally in person, or in writing in form B appended to the Bengal Maternity Benefit Rules, 1939, if before birth, and in form C appended to the said rules if after birth.

3. Maternity benefit is payable to the woman entitled to receive it. If she dies, but her child survives, the benefit due is payable to the person who takes care of the child. If both the woman and the child die, the benefit due is payable to the woman's nominee or her legal representative.

4. A woman must not work in a factory during the period for which she receives maternity benefit. Failure to adhere to this will render both the woman and the manager employing her liable to prosecution.

5. An employer may not dismiss a woman during the period for which she is entitled to be absent from work, and if dismissed without sufficient cause within six months, before delivery, she shall still be entitled to maternity benefit.

6. All payments against claims for maternity benefit shall be made in cash and receipts therefor shall be taken.

Bills introduced in the Bengal Legislative Assembly; Reports of Select Committees presented or to be presented to that Assembly; and Bills published before introduction in that Assembly.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 10L.A.—2nd January 1940.—In pursuance of the provisions of rule 50 of the Bengal Legislative Assembly Procedure Rules, the following Bill which was introduced in the Bengal Legislative Assembly on the 8th December 1939, is hereby published for general information together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed thereto.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (BENGAL AMENDMENT) BILL, 1939.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, in its application to the Province of Bengal, in the manner hereinafter appearing ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. (i) This Act may be called the Transfer of Property (Bengal Amendment) Act, 1939.

(ii) It extends to the whole Province of Bengal.

(iii) It shall come into force on such date as the Provincial Government may, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, appoint.

2. The Transfer of Property Act, 1882 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), shall, in its application to the Province of Bengal, be amended in the manner hereinafter provided.

3. After the definition of "immovable property" in section 3 of the said Act, the following shall be inserted :—

"'Homestead land' shall mean land on which house or building has been constructed for residential purpose and which has been used, or leased out, by the owner for residential purpose; and shall not only include the principal residential house or building, but also all kinds of buildings, huts, outhouses, courtyards, orchards, gardens, tanks and lands which are inseparable appurtenances thereto."

4. In clause (i) of section 6 of the said Act, delete the words "a tenant having an untransferable right to occupancy," appearing after the words "Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise." And also delete the word "tenant" together with the comma appearing after it from the last words of this clause "to assign his interest as such tenant, farmer or lessee."

5. At the end of section 6 of the said Act, add as follows :—

"(j) The tenancy relating to homestead land created before or after the Transfer of Property Act, shall be transferable."

6. At the end of section 196 of the said Act, add as follows :—

"Provided that any lease of homestead land with house or building standing thereon for a continuous period of twelve years or more, whether before or after or partly before and partly after the commencement of the Transfer of Property (Bengal Amendment) Act, 1938, shall not be determinable by such notice."

7. After section 106 of the said Act, the following sections shall be added :—

"106A. In the absence of any special contract to the contrary and in cases where but for the proviso to section 106 the tenancy was determinable by notice, the rent of a tenancy relating to homestead land shall be liable to enhancement.

The Transfer of Property (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1939.

(Clauses 8, 9.)

106B. (1) Where the rent of a tenancy relating to homestead land is liable to enhancement, it may, subject to any contract between the parties, be enhanced up to such limit as the Court thinks fair and equitable.

(2) In determining what is fair and equitable rent the Court shall have regard to (a) the circumstances under which the tenancy was created,—for instance, whether any fine or premium was paid on the creation of the tenancy, (b) the improvements, if any, made by the tenant or his predecessor-in-interest, (c) the rate of the rent in the neighbourhood for homestead lands of a similar description and with similar advantages and (d) whether there is any special reason for his holding at the existing rent.

(3) In settling what is fair and equitable rent under this section, the Court shall presume the existing rent to be fair and equitable until the contrary is proved.

(4) The Court shall accept such rents as fair and equitable as may be settled in compromise between the parties.

(5) The rent once settled under this section shall not be liable to any further enhancement."

8. In the second paragraph of clause (j) of section 108 of the said Act, delete the words " a tenant having an untransferable right of occupancy " together with a comma at the end of it appearing after the words " nothing in this clause shall be deemed to authorise." And also delete the word " tenant " together with a comma appearing after it from the last words of this clause " to assign his interest as such tenant, farmer or lessee."

9. After sub-section (1) of section 108 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be inserted :—

" (1a) The rent of a tenancy for homestead land shall be a first charge thereon."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

It is a matter of frequent occurrences that tenants occupying non-agricultural lands with house thereon have been evicted by landlords taking advantage of section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. This has created so much hardship to the tenants that some protection against eviction should be given and some status of permanency to tenants possessing the lands with the houses thereon for some years. With this end in view this amending Bill is introduced.

Contribution of the Board.

7. (1) The contribution of the Board shall be an amount equal to the amount subscribed by a subscriber, and shall be made on the 31st March of each year so long as the subscriber continues to be in the service of the Board.

(2) The Board shall pay to the credit of the account of a subscriber interest, at such rate as the Board may from time to time prescribe in this behalf, on the amount at his credit in the Fund.

Administration of the Fund.

8. The Board shall from time to time pay, through the Commissioner, all moneys received by him in respect of the Fund, into the Bank to the credit of an account to be styled "The Board of Wakfs Contributory Provident Fund Account". All moneys to the credit of such account shall be dealt with only in accordance with these rules, and no portion of such moneys shall be withdrawn from such account except by cheques bearing the signature of the Commissioner.

Investments.

9. All moneys not immediately required for the purpose of the Fund, may, from time to time, be invested by the Board at its discretion in any of the following securities, that is to say, any of the rupee or sterling securities of the Government of India, or any securities the interest on which is or shall be guaranteed by the Government of India, or in bonds, debentures, or securities of or issued by any public, municipal or local body or authority in India, or in deposit in any Bank in Calcutta approved by the Board. Subscriber's account.

12. A separate account containing a separate number shall be kept for each subscriber showing—

(2) When the abstract of balance and the memorandum referred to in sub-rule (1) do not tally, and the difference between the abstract of balance and the memorandum represents a deficit due to losses on realisation of investments or a smaller yield of interest from the investments than what is credited to the subscriber's account at the prescribed rate, the deficit shall be adjusted by a subscription from the Wakf Fund equal to the amount as is required to make up the deficiency. If, however, the sum standing to the credit of the subscriber is in excess of the amount represented in the memorandum a sum equal to the amount of the excess balance may be withdrawn for being transferred to the Wakf Fund.

Statement of account made up each year.

14. As soon as possible after the accounts for the year have been finally closed, each subscriber's account shall be made up with interest up to the 31st March, and a statement thereof shall be sent to him. Subscribers shall satisfy themselves as to the correctness of these statements, and unless errors in them are brought to notice within one month from the date of their receipt, no claims based on such errors shall be subsequently recognised, without the special sanction of the Board.

Nomination.

15. (1) Every subscriber shall be permitted to nominate any person or persons to whom the whole or a part of the amount payable to him, shall be paid in the event of his death. But if the nominee is a minor the subscriber shall at the time of nomination, also appoint a person of full age to whom, in the event of the subscriber dying before the minor nominee attains majority, the amount is to be paid on behalf of the minor nominee. Similarly when a nominee suffers under any other legal disability to give valid discharge, the subscriber shall appoint in the nomination paper some other person to receive payment or give a valid discharge on behalf of such nominee. No nomination in favour of a minor or of a person suffering under disability shall be valid without such appointment.

(2) If at the time of his making a nomination there is any dependant of the subscriber alive, the subscriber shall not nominate under this rule any person other than a dependant.

(3) If a subscriber who has no dependant at the time of making the nomination, nominates any person, such nomination shall be deemed to have been duly made in accordance with these rules only for so long as the subscriber has no dependant.

In the event of a subscriber, who had no dependant at the time he made the nomination, having a dependant or dependants afterwards, the subscriber shall formally cancel the previous nomination and make a fresh nomination in accordance with these rules.

Form of nomination.

16. All nominations shall be made and submitted in duplicate in the form set forth in Appendix B or Appendix C to these rules, as the case may be, signed by the subscriber and attested by two witnesses, and shall be sent to and registered in the office of the Board. After the application for nomination is registered, the office shall keep one copy for record and return the other to the subscriber. A nomination made and registered as aforesaid can only be modified or revoked by another nomination similarly signed, attested and registered.

Payment.

17. Except as is expressly provided by these rules, a subscriber or any person or persons acting on his behalf, in respect of his interest in the Fund, shall not be entitled to claim any payment of money to him or to them.

Sum to the credit of the subscriber when becomes payable.

18. The sum standing to the credit of a subscriber in the Fund, shall become payable on the termination of his service under the Board or on his death :

Provided that the Board shall have power to deduct any amount out of the sum standing to the credit of a subscriber in the event of his dismissal from service on any of the following grounds :—

(i) grave misconduct,

(ii) act of embezzlement,

(iii) any wilful default or neglect of duty by such subscriber.

Sum payable how to be dealt with.

19. When under these rules the sum standing to the credit of any subscriber, or the balance thereof after the making of any deduction under the proviso to rule 18, has become payable, the Commissioner shall pay the sum or balance, as the case may be, to the subscriber, or, if he is dead, shall—

(a) in the case where the subscriber has nominated under these rules a dependant to whom the whole sum or balance or any part thereof is payable in the event of the subscriber's death, pay the same to the dependant or to such person as may be authorised by law to receive payment on his behalf, or

(b) in the case where the whole sum or balance, as the case may be, does not exceed five thousand rupees, pay the same or any part thereof, which is not payable under clause (a), to the nominee of the deceased subscriber, or, if there is no such nominee, to any person appearing to the Commissioner to be entitled in law to receive it, or

(c) in the case where such sum or balance or any part thereof exceeds five thousand rupees and is not payable under clause (a), pay the same—

(i) to any nominee of the deceased subscriber, on production by such nominee of probate or letters of administration evidencing the grant to him of administration to the estate of the deceased or a certificate granted under Part X of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (XXXIX of 1925) entitling the holder thereof to receive payment of such sum, balance or part ; or

(ii) where there is no such nominee, to any person who produces such probate, letters or certificate.

Advances for special purposes.

20. (1) A temporary advance may be granted by the Commissioner at his discretion to a subscriber from the sum standing to his credit in the Fund for—

(a) paying expenses in connection with the illness of the subscriber or any of his dependants,

(b) paying expenses in connection with marriages, funerals or ceremonies which by religion or usage it is incumbent on the subscriber to perform, or

(c) other reasonable grounds, subject to the following conditions :—

(i) the subscriber shall satisfy the Commissioner of the necessity for the advance ;

(ii) the Commissioner shall record in writing the reason for granting the advance ; and

(iii) the advance shall not, except for reasons to be recorded in writing by the Commissioner, exceed three months' pay, or the amount standing to the credit of the subscriber in the Fund, whichever is less.

(2) An advance shall not, except for special reasons to be recorded in writing by the Commissioner, be granted until at least twelve months after the final repayment of all previous advances together with interest thereon.

Recovery of advances.

21. (1) An advance shall be recovered from the subscriber in such number of equal monthly instalments as the Commissioner may direct; but such number shall not be, less than twelve unless the subscriber so elects, or in any case, more than twenty-four. A subscriber may, at his option, make repayment in a smaller number of instalments than that prescribed by the Commissioner. Each instalment shall be a number of whole rupee, the amount of the advance being raised or reduced, if necessary, to admit of the fixation of such instalments.

(2) If more than one advance has been made to a subscriber, each advance shall be treated separately for the purpose of recovery.

(3) After the principal of the advance has been fully repaid, interest shall be paid sufficient to make the balance at the subscriber's credit, after repayment, equal to what it would have been had the advance not been made.

(4) Interest shall ordinarily be recovered in one instalment in the month after complete repayment of the principal; but, if the period referred to in sub-rule (1) exceeds twenty months, interest may, if the subscriber so desires, be recovered in two equal monthly instalments.

(5) Recovery shall be made monthly commencing from the first payment of a full month's salary, after the advance is granted. No recovery shall be made when the subscriber is on leave on medical grounds.

(6) Recoveries made under this rule, shall be credited, as they are made, to the account of the subscriber in the Fund.

PART IVA

Bills introduced in the Bengal Legislative Assembly; Reports of Select Committees presented or to be presented to that Assembly; and Bills published before introduction in that Assembly.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 92L.A.—8th January 1940.—The following report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Co-operative Societies Bill, 1938, with the Bill embodying amendments recommended by the Committee, is hereby published for general information.

Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Co-operative Societies Bill, 1938.

We, the members of the Select Committee to which the Bengal Co-operative Societies Bill, 1938, was referred by a motion carried in the Bengal Legislative Assembly on the 3rd August, 1938, have the honour to submit this our first report with the Bill embodying amendments recommended by us annexed. Matter recommended by us to be omitted has been printed in italics and enclosed in square brackets and new matter inserted by us has been underlined.

2. The Bill was published before introduction in the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 7th July, 1938. We do not consider it to have been altered by our recommendations to the extent of requiring republication.

3. The Committee met for the first time at 11 a.m. on the 19th August, 1938, and thereafter from time to time till the 15th December, 1939, when the Committee concluded their deliberations on the Bill. There were altogether 41 sittings of the Committee.

The reasons for the alterations recommended by us are enumerated briefly as follows:—

PREAMBLE.

The scope of the Bill has been indicated by insertion of the words "of moderate means".

CHAPTER I.

Clause 1.—The year of the Bill has been changed from 1938 to 1939 for convenience of reference.

Clause 7.—While we did not think it necessary for the Provincial Government to exercise any discretion in the matter we have made the scope of the clause more comprehensive by insertion of the Bengali equivalent of co-operation.

Clause 8.—We thought it preferable to have rules in place of orders for the purpose of exemptions contemplated in this clause and have given Co-operative Societies a right to represent their case at the time of framing of rules which might affect their interest in any way.

CHAPTER II.

Clause 9.—The clause has been altered by us to avoid the appointment of more Registrars than one for the province which appeared to be permissible under the original clause but which we considered unnecessary.

Clause 10.—We considered it necessary that some of the more important powers should be exercised by the Registrar himself and have entered these in a new schedule. The clause has been modified accordingly.

Clause 11.—The slight amendment is intended to emphasize the chief cause actuating Co-operative Societies.

Clause 13.—We considered it advisable that Government should prescribe the manner in which applications for registration will have to be made. This would result in uniformity of practice and should serve to simplify and expedite the process of registration. Sub-clause (2) has been deleted as unnecessary after the alteration in the earlier portion of the clause.

Clause 18.—The financing banks being primarily interested in the bye-laws of societies, we have thought it expedient to empower such banks to take the initiative in the matter of amendment of such bye-laws as they consider necessary. The societies have been given a right to be heard, whenever there is a proposal for amendment of their bye-laws, both by the financing banks concerned and the Registrar. The financing banks have also been given a right of appeal against any adverse decision by the Registrar.

CHAPTER III.

Clause 21.—We have found it desirable to define specifically the purposes for which the annual general meeting is to be held. We have also considered it necessary to put some limit to the Registrar's power of extending the date by which the meeting is to be held.

Clause 22—Sub-clause (1).—For the purpose of requisitioning special general meetings we have raised the proportion of requisitioning members in case of societies with not more than five hundred members from one-fifth to one-third and for sake of convenience we have provided for representation by delegates in societies with a membership exceeding 2,000.

Sub-clause (2).—To achieve the desired effect we have thought fit to make this provision mandatory.

Clause 23A.—This is intended to enable the Government to render assistance to a society at its own request to administer its affairs in an executive capacity.

Clauses 25 and 26 have been recast. We considered it desirable to make it clear that in case of mismanagement a society must, in the first instance, have an opportunity of reconstituting the Managing Committee. It was also considered necessary to give the Registrar power to debar undesirable elements from entering into or remaining in the Managing Committee for specified periods, and also to arrange for the appointment of a fresh Managing Committee within a reasonable time which may be extended by the Provincial Government. Appeals against orders disqualifying a member and also superseding a Managing Committee have also been povided for in the schedules as a sufficient safeguard against improper or unjustifiable interference.

Clause 27.—As a logical corollary to clause 26 we have given the Registrar power to cancel the appointment of the person appointed to manage the affairs of the Committee under that clause.

CHAPTER IV.

Clauses 31 and 32.—We considered it advisable to leave it to Government, and not to the Registrar, to prescribe the manner of publication of the balance sheet and also to make rules for maintenance of fluid resources of societies.

New Clause 33.—This is original clause 37 with the substitution of the word "shall" for "may" in the third line and the addition of sub-clause (2). We considered this substitution essentially necessary in the interest of the co-operative movement in the province. Although this might involve Government in some risk we thought that such risk must be undertaken for securing public confidence in deserving co-operative organisations. Sub-clause (2) has been inserted by us as a safeguard against indiscriminate issues of debentures.

New Clause 33A is the original clause 33 with some consequential and drafting alterations only.

Clause 37 has been omitted as the necessary provision has been made in new clause 33.

Clause 39(1).—We considered it expedient that Government should by rule prescribe the conditions in which the Registrar may sanction loans in excess of the credit fixed for a member.

Sub-clause (2).—Co-operative Land Mortgage Banks should not be subject to a restriction which is repugnant to their very purpose, and therefore we have excluded them from the operation of the restriction contained in this sub-clause.

CHAPTER V.

Clause 43.—We considered three months to be too short a period for mature consideration of any proposed alteration in the form of liability and have thought it proper to extend the period to six months.

Clause 44.—The clause has been expanded to include both members and prospective members so that a statement of their outstanding liability to all their creditors can be ascertained before advancing a loan.

We thought it proper to let the society fix its own time limit for calling for statement of claims instead of having the period rigidly fixed by statute

Clause 45.—The last few lines have been omitted by us as we considered it dangerous and undesirable to complicate matters by interfering with the decrees of Courts.

Clause 46.—Sub-clause (2) of this clause has been omitted as we did not think it proper to extend the normal period of limitation as originally contemplated.

Clause 47.—In this clause we have considered it desirable to provide two new sub-clauses (aa) and (e). We have excluded from sub-clause (a) the provision regarding irrigation societies and have put it into the new sub-clause (aa) and we have extended it to make the loan a first charge upon the land irrigated even when the land changes hands; new sub-clause (e) extends to the house-building societies the facilities proposed for other types of society.

New Clauses 47A and 47B.—These clauses are intended to remove a great difficulty felt by irrigation and embankment societies, which are hampered by the fact that persons whose lands are situated near to the source of irrigation or to the embankment frequently refuse to join such a society, confident that the proposed benefit must accrue to them whether they join or not. Such societies have consequently been provided with facilities to secure a demarcation of the area to be benefited, and where 60 per cent. of this area is possessed by members of the society, to levy an equitable rate upon non-members.

New Clause 48A.—We have thought it desirable to insert this new clause for facility of realisation of dues from salaried officers in the interest of the societies.

Clause 50(2).—This sub-clause is necessitated by the division between Central and Provincial Governments of the jurisdiction over stamp duties: sub-section (2) of section 28 of the existing Act is being repealed in so far as it relates to the stamp duties referred to in this sub-clause, which fall within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Government.

CHAPTER VI.

Clause 52—Sub-clause (c).—Past experience has shown the necessity of providing that previous sanction of the Registrar must be obtained before any Co-operative Society can invest or deposit its funds with another Co-operative Society of limited liability. In many cases he is the best person to judge the advisability of such transactions.

Sub-clause (d) has been omitted as the amended sub-clause (e) is expected to cover this when appropriate rules are framed.

Clause 53.—We have considered it advisable to specify clearly the ways in which the reserve funds of societies may be invested without leaving it to the discretion of the persons responsible for the management of the societies for the time being. This is likely to raise public confidence in the societies with regard to their stability and financial soundness. Sub-clause (4) has been expanded with this end in view.

Clause 54.—We thought it unecessary that every trivial instance of a bad or doubtful asset should necessitate a reference to the Registrar before any dividend can be distributed, and so we have given the audit officer discretion to decide whether such sanction is necessary.

Clause 55.—In addition to the voluntary contribution to charity we have thought it desirable to provide for a compulsory contribution to a fund for furthering the objects of the co-operative movement.

CHAPTER VII.

Clause 57.—The words "at a meeting" have been inserted to avoid any possibility of confusion.

Clause 59.—We did not consider it necessary for a member or prospective member of a Society with limited liability to furnish a statement of his properties, except when he applies for a loan or offers to stand as surety. The clause as redrafted should avoid unnecessary harassment of applicants without exposing societies to any risk.

Clause 60.—This has been redrafted. We did not consider it advisable to leave it to the discretion of the society to permit utilisation of a loan for a purpose other than that for which it was originally taken and we have considered it expedient to leave it to Government to prescribe the manner of refunding a loan which has been misused.

Clause 63.—We did not consider it necessary to make any distinction between the liability of a person ceasing to be a member and of a deceased member and in both the cases we have considered two years from the termination of membership sufficient period for continuance of liability to the society.

Clause 67.—In sub-clause (i) (b) we thought it inadvisable to dispense with the necessity of a succession certificate as contemplated by the original clause. We were also of the opinion that the Managing Committee in coming to a decision should follow certain principles to be prescribed in the rules for the sake of uniformity of practice.

Clause 70.—We thought it desirable to provide that calculations of money due from the Co-operative Society must be made in accordance with the rules to be framed for the purpose.

CHAPTER VIII.

There was prolonged discussion over the general principles involved in this Chapter. We felt strongly that the audit of societies should be separated from their administration, but it was reluctantly conceded that immediate separation would impose a heavy cost upon the movement and would not be workable in practice, and so in making amendments we have confined ourselves to the purpose of ensuring the punctuality of annual audit. The ultimate object, however, is one which we regard as of the highest importance and we wish to record our confident expectation that Government will by executive action adopt every means in their power to secure that officers responsible for the audit of societies will as far as possible be completely independent of officers engaged in their day-to-day administration.

Clause 72.—The co-operative year does not close with the same month for all types of society and so it has been considered advisable to leave it to the rules to fix the dates of audit. There being no substantive provision in the body of the original Bill for realisation of audit fees, we thought it necessary to insert such a provision to support the original entry in the rule-making clause.

Clause 74.—This clause has been expanded by insertion of item (1)(h) to enable Government to prescribe hereafter any additional items which experience may show to be necessary in the interests of societies.

Clause 75.—For the reason given against clause 72 and because the audit of certain large societies requires very much more time than the normal, we have preferred to leave it to the rules to prescribe the date for submission of the audit report.

Clause 76A.—Hitherto the staffs engaged by Co-operative Central Banks for the supervision of Primary Societies have been separately recruited and employed by each Central Bank. We thought it advisable to amalgamate these into one central service. Provision has therefore been made, enabling the Provincial Government to constitute a body with statutory authority to administer such a service and with power to levy fees to meet the charges incurred; we thought it desirable that three-fourths of the members of this body should be elected to office by Central Banks and we have provided accordingly.

Clause 77—Sub-clause (2).—We considered it advisable to have rules for the guidance of the Registrar for the purpose of this sub-clause.

Clause 77—Sub-clause (3).—A mandatory provision to supply to the Registrar copies of notes of inspection made at the instance of financing banks was considered unnecessary. We have given the Registrar the power to call for a report upon the result of inspection in any case in which he might consider it desirable to look into them either on his own initiative or on the request of any interested party.

Clause 78.—The only material alteration in this clause is for the purpose of giving the society an opportunity of being heard before its books of accounts are inspected at the instance of an unsatisfied creditor. This was necessary in the interest of the society and for avoiding inspection on insufficient grounds.

Clause 79—Sub-clause (1) has been recast. As we did not consider it necessary to have a compulsory enquiry on the requisition of the Magistrate we have grafted the original sub-clause (2) (a) into this sub-clause.

Sub-clause (2) (a) has been modified by putting all financing banks on the same footing as we did not find any reason for discrimination in this matter. The proviso to sub-clause (2) (c) has been necessitated by the existence of a number of unwieldy societies where the application of the normal law is not likely to result in smooth working.

Sub-clause (2) (d) has been inserted by us as we thought that the creditors should have an option of securing an enquiry, provided they represent at least one-half of the borrowed capital. This provision is expected to have a healthy influence on the finance of borrowing societies.

Clause 80—Sub-clause (2) has been inserted by us to prevent any possible abuse in the matter of incurring any expenditure of this nature. In our opinion this provision will prevent undesirable wastage from the funds of societies.

CHAPTER X.

Clause 85.—We thought it advisable to have definite rules to be followed by the Registrar in the matter of appointment and removal of liquidators and have made the necessary provision in the clause.

Clause 86(2)(i).—We have considered it desirable to consult the members of the society before disposal of the surplus. This will give them opportunities of looking into the details and making their own suggestions in the matter.

CHAPTER XI.

Clause 98.—It was considered proper that all persons entitled to notice, irrespective of whether they have or have not received any notice, should have a right to be heard in the matter and the clause has been amended accordingly.

Clause 99(b).—We consider ten per centum to be too high a proportion of the purchase money for payment as compensation when a sale is set aside, and we have therefore reduced the figure to five percentum.

Clause 100(2)(b).—It may be that an application is disallowed by a Bank on purely formal grounds, and if the applicant does not proceed after such rejection there is no reason why the confirmation of sale should not follow. To avoid any subsequent objection by such applicant we have thought it advisable to make the provision unambiguous.

Clause 102.—It was considered advisable to have a prescribed form for issue of sale certificates for the sake of uniformity of practice and convenience of work.

Clause 104.—Our intention in proposing the amendment to this clause was to cover all cases irrespective of whether a trustee has or has not been appointed, because the appointment of a trustee is not imperative except where the Provincial Government has guaranteed the principal of or interest on debentures issued in accordance with clause 33.

Clause 105.—We have amended the clause so that the title of a purchaser after the sale has been confirmed under clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section 100 may not be open to any subsequent challenge on any account whatsoever. In the absence of such a provision we apprehended the possibility of prospective purchasers being frightened away with the result that in general the potential value of property mortgaged to a Land Mortgage Bank would depreciate, a fact which would inevitably handicap the progress of such Banks.

Clause 108.—This has been recast in order to avoid any possible confusion over the powers and rights of the Registrar.

Clause 109.—We have suggested that the circumstances in which action may be taken by the banks under this clause should be prescribed by rules to be framed for the purpose.

Clauses 110 and 111.—The alterations in these clauses have been suggested by us to make the intention clear. The amendments in these clauses have necessitated the amendment of the definition in clause 2(d).

Clause 112.—This clause has been deleted in view of the recent amendments in the Bengal Tenancy Act regarding the right of pre-emption and payment of landlords' fees.

Clauses 113, 113A and 113B.—The provisions of clause 113 were too drastic and would have reacted detrimentally upon revenue sales. We consider that the modified clause, giving to a Land Mortgage Bank the right to receive prior notice of any sale of any property mortgaged to the Bank, will afford to these Banks sufficient protection without adversely affecting any third party.

CHAPTER XII.

Clause 118.—We have inserted the word "document" in this clause to make the list of necessary papers exhaustive.

Clause 119.—We have considered it desirable to have rules prescribed for the guidance of the Registrar in the matter of conditional attachment under this clause.

Clause 120.—We have thought it more appropriate that Government, and not the Registrar, shall empower any person other than the Registrar to proceed under this clause.

Clause 124.—We have considered it advisable to insert a special proviso fixing the limits of instalments for realisation of sums due under this Act from wage earners in receipt of small salaries as we thought that the ordinary limits under the C. P. Code, 1908 might hamper the formation and working of wage earners' societies.

CHAPTER XIII.

Clause 129.—The proviso to sub-clause (2) has been inserted by us in the interest of justice. We have provided that any person likely to be adversely affected by the Registrar's order reversing or modifying any previous decision should be given an opportunity of being heard before such order is passed.

CHAPTER XIV.

Clauses 132 and 133.—We thought that all Registers of Co-operative Societies which are to be accepted as evidence in legal proceedings must be kept in a manner to be prescribed by Government to give them the sanctity intended to be bestowed upon them.

CHAPTER XV.

The amendments in this Chapter have been necessitated by the changes in the various clauses of the Bill. There are also a few amendments which are of a verbal or drafting nature.

THE SCHEDULES.

First Schedule.

The amendment is explained by the remarks against sub-section (2) of clause 50.

Second Schedule.

This new schedule was necessitated by the amendment of clause 10.

Third Schedule.

The alternative methods of recovery against serials 2 and 4 were considered by us unnecessary and undesirable as we thought that recovery by the Collector in both these instances would be sufficiently effective.

Fourth Schedule.

Serials A and B.—We have considered it desirable to provide for appeal against an order refusing registration of a society or its bye-laws or any amendment of the bye-laws; these are very valuable rights and in case of interference with them any aggrieved party should have an opportunity of placing his case before a higher authority.

Serial 2.—The amendment of this item was necessitated by the material alterations effected in clauses 25 and 26 of the Bill.

Serials 2A and 2B have been inserted by us in the interests of justice to provide for appeals by non-members against decisions under clauses 47A and 47B. We consider the Collector to be the appropriate appellate authority with regard to any entry in or omission from maps or statements of the irrigable area or of the protected area prepared under clauses 47A and 47B, but we consider the Registrar to be the appropriate appellate authority with regard to the actual assessments of the water rates or of embankment protection rates under those clauses.

Serial 3A.—We have considered it desirable to give any person aggrieved by an order of apportiontment of costs under section 80 an opportunity of appeal within one month from the receipt of the order, and we believe that such appeals should lie to the District Judge.

All amendments other than those specifically mentioned in this Report are of minor importance; they are either purely formal, consequential or merely of a drafting nature.

NOTE.—The signatures of Maulvi Abdul Latif Biswas, Maulvi Md. Hasanuzzaman and Mr. M. Shamsuddin Ahmed had not been received, till the time of printing this report. Mr. L. M. Crosfield since resigned his membership and Maulvi Abdul Bari is deceased.

Note of dissent of Maulvi Azhar Ali, M.L.A.

I sign the Bill subject to this note of dissent that unlimited liability should not be forced upon the people, who are willing to register society of limited liability, regard being had to the condition and circumstances of the persons concerned. Hence I like to impress that clear provision should be made in the Act giving full liberty to the persons to open societies of limited liability.

Minute of dissent by Mr. Satya Priya Banerjee, M.L.A.

I am constrained to submit this note of dissent because I find, to my utter regret that my approach to the problems confronting the co-operative movement is essentially different from that of the majority and that there is a fundamental difference in outlook between them and myself. I tried my best to accommodate myself to the views of the majority but I regret to have to note that I thought best to agree to differ from them when vital questions affecting matters of principle were concerned.

Before coming to deal with the points of difference, I shall be failing in my duty if I do not congratulate the fellow members of the Committee on their having been able to remove some of the obnoxious features of the Bill and having accepted some of my suggestions, particularly those relating to the provision of guarantee by Government of both principal and interest as contemplated in section 33 and the provision of 5 per cent. out of net profits for the purpose of co-operative education, a provision which, if faithfully carried out, will go a great way towards the development of genuine co-operative movement.

Limited liability versus Unlimited liability.

The primary societies constitute the foundation on which the whole edifice of the co-operative movement rests. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, to consider as to how these societies should be constituted, as to whether the liability of these societies should be limited or unlimited or whether the members should be given the option to decide as to the nature of the liability.

Before proceeding further, let us consider how the principle of unlimited liability has worked during the course of the last 35 years. It is said in the Government of India resolution of 1914 and the McLagan Committee report on Co-operation of 1915 that the apprehension at one time entertained and to which pointed expression was given by the late Mr. G. K. Gokhale during the passage of the Bill in 1903 in the Imperial Legislative Council that people will generally be very unwilling to accept unlimited liability has proved groundless and that the principle of unlimited liability has been accepted without demur and its adoption has not kept out the richer peasants nor has there been any demand for the substitution of limited responsibility. I am afraid the foregoing statement cannot be accepted at its face value, because during the course of the first ten years the effects of unlimited liability could not have been studied in its proper prospective, as only 14 societies had been dissolved and liquidated during the above period. Since then, however, we do not get any reference as to the effect of the working of the principle of unlimited liability on the members of co-operative societies in the annual reports, although quite a large number of these societies go into liquidation every year and as a consequence unlimited liability must have come into play. Obviously its application in any given case must result in loss and often in great misery to, and ruin of, the members for whose benefit the societies were formed, besides shaking confidence in the movement over a considerable area. If it is contended, however (as is done by the Bengal Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee), that unlimited liability has not been or will not be enforced: it must be admitted that it has been a dangerous sham and that a fraud has been perpetrated on the creditors in that it has served to create a false sense of security in them. In fact, the present Registrar in his scheme of rehabilitation of the co-operative credit movement has indicated the danger of serious agrarian troubles to which the realisation of assets of societies may lead. In either case, therefore, unlimited liability has no justification.

The case for unlimited liability rests mainly upon two factors:—

(1) The moral value inherent in unlimited liability: mutual knowledge and mutual trust which form the corner-stone of the co-operative movement based on Raiffeisen Model find better scope for play in unlimited liability societies.

(2) The confidence of the money market and the influx of deposits.

As regards the first, I do not deprecate or under-estimate the moral value of unlimited liability, provided, of course, it is accepted after a thorough understanding of its implications and enforced by local opinion of the members. But the fact is that an adequate measure of watchfulness and control and that sense of responsibility which is vital to the success of a co-operative society has not been forthcoming. And the more it is considered, the more it seems unattractive from the point of view of the solvent agriculturist, the more it is considered to be a stumbling block to the spread of co-operative credit in some rural areas.

Whatever might have been said of it at the inception of the movement the experience of the last few years points definitely to the conclusion that the expectations that were originally entertained with regard to it have not been fulfilled and that it has outlived its period of utility; and regard being had to the new orientation of the co-operative movement, viz., the ideal of combination wherever possible of various functions in the same society so as to deal as far as possible with the various economic needs of the villager through one organisation in the village, the conclusion becomes irresistible that option as to the choice of liability should be left to the members themselves and not superimposed from above. And I am supported in this view of mine by authorities both at home and abroad:—

(1) The Royal Commission on Agriculture has recognised the fact that under the law rural credit societies must have unlimited liability as an impediment to their undertaking business for which limited liability is more suitable.

(2) The Central Banking Enquiry Committee in their report say they have no objection to limited liability societies being encouraged in places where the co-operative movement cannot make a great headway under the unlimited liability system.

(3) Mr. Deivasikhamoni Mudaliar, ex-Joint-Registrar of Madras, in his report on the condition of Co-operative Movement in Orissa has given a very timely warning saying—the fear of unlimited liability did not result in efficient work.

(4) The Madras Committee on co-operation presided over by Sir T. Vijayaraghava Chariar and consisting of eminent co-operators well known throughout India has come to the definite conclusion in the matter as follows:—

The liability of a society whose primary object is the creation of funds to be lent to its members and of which the majority of members are agriculturists shall ordinarily be limited. But if, in the opinion of the Registrar, having regard to local opinion and other circumstances, unlimited liability is more suitable for any society, the liability may be unlimited.

Now, let us turn our attention to some of the countries abroad:—

(a) Holland: Dr. C. Westrate of the Raiffeisen Central Bank, Utrecht, in the year book of Agricultural Co-operation writes—

If we have learnt anything in these last years, it is that unlimited liabiltiy may be a foundation stone, but that we must do our utmost to let it lie very quietly where it is. Use of this liability naturally impairs the support of its members and the necessary feeling that co-operation is valuable to them. We have learnt, or rather we have realised that a sound economic purpose, good organisation and good management are much more essential to the well-being of co-operation than the most complete liability of members.

(b) Japan: It adopted in 1900 the pure Raiffeisen Model of agricultural credit with unlimited liability but felt it necessary later on to convert such societies into limited or guaranteed liability societies. As a result, according to an authoritative publication of 1934, unlimited liability societies formed only 8 per cent. of the total number, though 85 per cent. had credit as their object, singly or in combination with other purposes.

(c) Denmark: The recent American Committee of Enquiry on co-operative enterprise in Europe in their report published in 1937 says: The principle of joint and several liability has long been considered fundamental to co-operative organisation. Some leaders to-day, however, maintain that experience refutes the view, and that joint and several liability should be done away with. Many of the new societies have adapted the principle of limited liability.

(d) Finnland: Under the Co-operative Act of 1901 which with certain amendments is still in force, at the option of the members, liability can be limited to the society's own resources, or a limited or unlimited individual liability may be specified in the articles of incorporation.

(e) France: It is the opinion of the American Committee above referred to that the progress of rural credit organisation was aided by a law of 1894 which limited members' liability.

In this connection it is necessary to mention that the Raiffeisen Credit Societies of Germany from which the Government of India drew its inspiration at the inception of the movement were based on unlimited liability because they had no other option, as until the Act of 1889 only societies with unlimited liability could be established and that the admissibility of limited liability under the Act of 1889 opened up new possibilities in the whole field of co-operation and as a result rural credit societies established on this basis in Pommerania and Saxony have met with great success. We should bear in mind that with the Germans, the adaption of unlimited liability was not a matter of principle but of expediency, a judgment arrived at by Mr. J. R. Cahill in his classic report a parliamentary blue-book on agricultural credit and co-operation in Germany in 1914—while we, as imitators, have raised it to a principle and have made of it a fetish after having adapted it without taking care to assimilate in ourselves the spirit of self-help and in the language of Dr. Fay, a name to conjure with in the world of co-operation, to adopt, "the more fundamental attribute of deposits derived from the same social stratum as that to which credits are issued".

Moreover, the Government did not indeed force unlimited liability on agricultural credit societies at first. In fact, the societies organised in some of the provinces in the first few years were all on the basis of limited liability and it was by persuasion and later examples they changed over to unlimited liability. Even the Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle in introducing the Co-operative Societies Bill in 1911 expressed the view that there was no reason why in some cases rural societies should not be formed of limited liability.

Regarding the second, viz., that the provision of unlimited liability inspires confidence in the money market and secures influx of deposit, I submit that more is to be attributed to the belief that the Government through its control is behind the movement and as such the money invested is safe. This view was expressed by Mr. Gilbert Slater as early as 1920 as also by Mr. Manu Subedar in his minority report of the Central Banking Enquiry Committee and is further re-inforced by on co-operation. It is found that many of those who have advocated unlimited several answers to the questionnaire submitted to the Madras Committee liability for other reasons have said in their answers that a change in the liability will not interfere with the inflow of deposits and that the confidence of the money market depends to some extent on the belief that Government is behind the movement and largely on the good management of societies.

And I propose to move amendment in the light of observations made above.

In clause 23, I would like to make a provision for a Council of Supervision in addition to the Committee of Management. This is a feature of every Co-operative Organisation in Europe and America and expert opinion is agreed that it is serving a useful purpose there and I think the absence of this body here in India is responsible in many cases for the mismanagement of the Managing Committee.

The foreign experts associated with the Indian Central Banking Enquiry Committee definitely was of opinion that a "Supervising Board with the task of supervising the management should be prescribed by the Co-operative Law."

Mr. M. L. Darling, after his study tour in Europe in 1922, was also of opinion that in Central Banks, urban banks, and in larger trading societies the experiment of having a Board of Supervision should be made.

Clause 25.—Sub-clause (2) of this clause should be deleted as by the retention of this clause the Registrar is indirectly empowered to act almost in the same way as he was empowered to act in the original Bill and thus the whole purpose of the amendment made by the Select Committee in sub-clause (1) will be frustrated.

Clause 72.—Regarding audit, the Bill does not make any improvement, although in the note appended to the report of the Select Committee, it is admitted that separation of audit from administration is desirable. The note of the Select Committee is good so far as it goes, but it ought to have gone further if it is really desired to separate audit from administration because, in the language of Dr. J. P. Niyogi, the Mint Professor of Economics of the Calcutta University, "it is difficult to reconcile oneself to the position under which the audit staff remains under the administrative control of the Department the accounts of which the auditors are called upon to scrutinise and financial property requires that the audit staff should be removed from the control of the Co-operative Department.

The importance of audit in Co-operative Societies it is hardly possible to exaggerate. The Co-operative Organisations are not charitable institutions—they are business organisations, it may be, for social service and it is of the greatest importance, therefore, to insist upon a thorough and efficient audit in order to prevent bad management and embezzlement and to inspire confidence amongst the investing public. In order that this may be done, audit should be entirely independent because any one who runs may read that "an auditor should be quite free and not be always thinking as to whether a certain remark will please or displease his superior officer who is responsible for the good working of that institution." Instances are not wanting "in which obvious and glaring defects in the working of the Financing Banks have not been brought to light by departmental auditors."

To put an end to all these defects, it has been suggested that audit should, in due course, be wholly separated from or altogether removed from any control by the Department which is itself responsible for the administration of co-operative societies. And this view has been supported by all the non-official bodies and individuals, as will be evident from the following:—

(a) According to the recommendations of the Sub-Committee of the majority party in the Bihar Legislature, it was agreed that the audit agency should be independent of the department and its functions should be regulated by definite rules the operation of which should be guided by an independent authority.

(b) The Bengal Provincial Co-operative Bank whose opinion had been sought for by the Select Committee observes as follows:—

> It is vital for the health of co-operative credit that all audit should be independent. Until that can be provided, there can be no reliability. All larger institutions (Provincial Banks, Central Banks, Urban Banks) should come under Accountant-General, Bengal's audit.

(c) Similar is also the opinion of the apex non-official organisation, namely, Bengal Co-operative Organisation Society, now Christened Bengal Co-operative Alliance. They suggest that some provision should be made to make audit independent of the Registrar's control and propose that audit of the Financing Banks and limited liability societies may be placed under the Accountant-General.

(d) Dr. J. C. Sinha, Professor of Economics, Presidency College, Calcutta, holds that there should be a perfectly independent audit by the staff of the Accountant-General, of the Primary Societies as well as of the Central Banks.

(e) Rai Bahadur Nagendra Nath Mukherjee for a long time associated with the co-operative movement in the province, opines that audit should be taken out of the hands of the Registrar and placed under Accountant-General, Bengal, if it is not possible to get the very large number of Primary Societies audited by the Accountant-General, the audit of the Provincial Bank and Central Banks should come under the Accountant-General and this can be done without involving any additional cost in this connection by placing the formal audit staff for those institutions under the control of the Accountant-General, Bengal.

(f) Professor Sadeque also holds the same opinion although under different terminology.

That the prevailing system of audit has been defective has also been pointed out by responsible official bodies like the Indian Central Banking Enquiry Committee and the foreign experts associated with it. Even the present Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal, has admitted the possibilities of defalcation under the present system of audit and to crown all, it is remarkable that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister in his very recent note on the problem of rural credit has fallen in line with the non-official opinion as will appear from the following extract from his note:—

"The present system of departmental audit of the co-operative societies does not appear to be satisfactory as it cannot ensure the obtaining of that condition which is desired. It does not engender public confidence very much, nor does it give the real position very clearly. The attempt should be to make the audit more and more in the nature of commercial audits to be undertaken by independent auditors. But even if in the present atmosphere audit by an official agency cannot be dispensed with, it is essential to ensure the independence of the auditors, by making the audit staff divorced from the administrative staff and by seeing that their departmental loyalty does not stand in the way of a frank and full exposure of defects in the working of the co-operative institutions. If audit is to be done by Government staff, a separate department for the auditing of co-operative societies and land-mortgage banks should be set up."

And I propose to move an amendment in accordance with the remarks made above.

Advisory Committee.—It is unfortunate, that unlike other countries, the co-operative movement here is an exotic growth, it is not a movement springing from the soil but a governmental policy inposed from above. Faced with the consequences of two terrible famines and impressed with the achievement of the movement in Europe as embodied in Nicholson's report on Land and Agricultural Banks and Dupernex's excellent book on "Peoples' Bank for Northern India", Lord Curzon conceived the idea of and passed, a co-operative legislation in 1904, the object of which was, in his own words "to foster a spirit of responsibility and self-reliance" among the people.

From the very inception it was the avowed intention of the Government to make the movement popular and self-dependent. Let the resolution of the Government of India, dated the 29th of April, 1904, which even after the lapse of 35 years amply repays perusal speak for itself. Among other things, the resolution says: "the Government of India desire to impress upon all Government that the regulative interference of the Government should be limited strictly to essentials so as to leave spontaneous growth unhampered.

While State help and support will be needed to begin with, the object to be kept in view is to teach the people to help themselves and we shall not have succeeded unless we are eventually able to withdraw that support. They desire further to lay stress on the necessity of reducing restrictions to a minimum, so that people may be encouraged to work out the problem on their own lines with such guidance and advice as can be given to them

The Government of India trust that with the co-operation of local Governments, the scheme may neither suffer from the absence of that official guidance without which a successful start cannot be hoped for in this country, nor be prevented by too much supervision and too many restrictions from attaining its full development". Seven years later, the Hon'ble Sir Robert Carlyle while introducing the Co-operative Societies Bill in 1911 said it is of the utmost importance to the healthy and successful development of the movement that Government interference should be reduced to a minimum. In 1914 again the Government of India reiterated their policy in the following words:—

The movement must in its essence be a popular one and nothing should be done to weaken the feeling among co-operators that it is based upon self-reliance and independence. Government, therefore, in the best interests of the movement, must not allow co-operation in this country to become an official concern managed by State establishments.

Ideally speaking, every co-operative society in every country ought to have been the result of spontaneous organisation on the part of its original members but in this world of ours with its imperfections, there have been populations in which co-operative systems would not have developed without the assistance of either the philanthropists or the State—what Raiffeisen and Schulze—Delitsch did for the people of Germany, the Government of India under the guidance of Lord Curzon attempted to do for India. Had the Provincial Governments pushed on with the development of the co-operative movement in consonance with the declared policy of Government of India, instead of playing with it as they have done the continuance of the State control at every turn which is detrimental to the best interests of the movement would have been a thing of the past, and the raiyat, though a small man by himself, multiplied by 300 millions, would have been on the way to organise his credit and capitalise his labour till he became a giant able to move the world.

But the fact is, the movement began as an official one and has been continuing as such and the official control instead of having slackened has largely increased and departmental interference instead of being diminished has been also on the increase, and that in spite of the declaration of the Government and persistent insistence of non-official co-operators to de-officialise it.

It is a truism to say that work done by a large centralised department tends to become mechanical and listless. Permanent officials in charge of the department who actually guide and control the movement after a time tend to sink into routine, cease to generate initiative and lack that vision and touch so essential to organise the tenants and workers on a co-operative basis.

As a corrective to this inevitable state of things, I propose that a statutory advisory board be set up which would enable the department to keep it in direct touch with the wishes of the people with regard to the movement, which would act as a sufficient safeguard against excessive official activity and interference and lastly which would help the Registrar in directing the movement on right lines.

This suggestion is not new—a similar suggestion was made in the Report of the Recess Committee on the establishment of a Department of Agriculture and Industries for Ireland in 1896. It has been also recommended by the Mysore Committee on Co-operation of 1936. Mr. K. D. Mudaliar in the report already referred to has also suggested the appointment of an advisory committee consisting of leading co-operators and bankers for periodical discussion on all important matters of policy and the Hon'ble the Finance Minister in his note to which reference has already been made has also recommended the formation of an Advisory Board.

The question now arises—how the Board should be constituted? I propose the following as an answer to the question:—

(1) one representative duly elected by the Bengal Provincial Co-operative Bank in accordance with its bye-laws at a general meeting,

(2) one representative duly elected by the Bengal Co-operative Alliance in accordance with the bye-laws at a general meeting,

(3) two representatives from the Central Banks elected in the manner prescribed,

(4) one representative from the Urban Bank,

(5) one economic expert to be nominated alternately by the Calcutta and Dacca Universities,

(6) one Banking Expert deputed by the Reserve Bank of India,

(7) one Co-operative Expert to be nominated by the Government,

(8) three representatives from the Legislative Assembly elected by the method of single transferable vote.

Clause 121.—This clause seems to penalise only those persons who have taken part in the management or organisation of the society and persons connected with audit, inspection or supervision do not come within the purview of this section. This seems to be unfair. All these classes of persons should be brought within its purview.

Clause 126.—I would suggest that the privilege of this clause may be extended to the non-official co-operators and the clause amended as follows:—

No suit, prosecution or legal proceeding whatever shall lie against any person in respect of anything in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act.

Clause 134.—Although one of the most obnoxious features of this clause has been deleted by the Select Committee, viz., sub-section (4) empowering the Provincial Government to delegate all or any of its powers to any other authority, it is to be hoped that under the cloak of "carrying out the purposes of the Act", the Provincial Government does not affect any substantive right or introduce any new obligation not provided for in the Act by the rules and that only matters relating to the practice and procedure should be dealt with, and regulated by, the rules.

Lastly, I would like to make a few general observations with regard to the Bill.

The Bill has been so framed as to make the Registrar the centre of the picture and not the society on the assumption that a tightening of official control by clothing the Registrar with very wide powers over the movement and subjecting the co-operative institutions to tutelage and spoon-feeding in a larger measure will improve the movement in this province, forgetting that the essential character of the co-operative movement, viz., that it is a people's movement will thereby be lost, that self-respecting and independent persons will fight shy of the movement, non-official initiative and enterprise will be discouraged and sense of responsibility will be destroyed among those to whose care the institutions should be normally committed.

It is remarkable that although the Registrar has been armed with dictatorial powers, no liability has been fastened upon him, on the contrary section 126 has been framed to exempt him from any liability.

It is only true to say that a good Registrar will make a bad Act work good and a bad Registrar will work a good Act bad—it is incumbent on the Government, therefore, to make a proper selection of the Registrar and in the matter of selection the following points should be given due consideration:—

(1) He should be a man of proved ability.

(2) He should be a man of wide vision and catholicity of outlook.

(3) He should make himself acquainted with economic condition and practices in the province and throughout India.

(4) He should undergo a period of training specially provided for the purpose.

The Government at the time of selecting persons for the post of the Registrar should bear in mind the observations made by the McLagan Committee on Co-operation and the Royal Commission on Agriculture.

The Reserve Bank of India very recently in their Statutory report on Rural Agricultural Credit while stressing these remarks of the McLagan Committee and the Royal Commission on Agriculture observed:

We have given these lengthy quotations because we feel that not every Provincial Government has given these valuable recommendations the attention they deserve. The non-observance of these principles has resulted in hampering the progress of the movement in some of the provinces and we strongly recommend them to the serious consideration of the various Provincial Governments.

I reserve to myself the right to move amendments.

Note of dissent by Mr. Surendra Mohan Maitra, M.L.A.

I fully agree with the note of dissent submitted by Mr. Satyapriya Banerjee, M.L.A.

Joint additional note by Khan Bahadur A. F. M. Abdur Rahman, M.L.A., Mr. Syed Abdul Majid, M.L.A., Mr. Fazlur Rahman, M.L.A. (Dacca), Babu Kshetra Nath Singha, M.L.A., Maulvi Azhar Ali, M.L.A., and Khan Sahib Syed Md. Afzal, M.L.A.

In view of the present condition of the movement and in our eagerness to improve it as soon as possible we have bestowed large powers on the Registrar under this Bill which perhaps he should not have if the condition of the movement were otherwise. We do not however grudge these powers being exercised by him for the improvement of the position of the movement. But even then we feel that as this movement depends almost entirely on the whole-hearted sympathy, co-operation and good work of its constituent members, the personality and efficiency of the Registrar counts a very great deal in enlisting such sympathy and co-operation of the members and general public. We therefore desire that our views regarding the selection of Registrar should find a place in the report of the Select Committee. In our considered opinion the following should be some of the essential qualifications of a Registrar:—

(a) He should have sufficiently long experience of Bengal village and the life of its inmates acquired by close association with them.

(b) He should be genuinely sympathetic towards their difficulties and aspirations and temperamentally fit to give expression to such sympathy by his words and deeds.

(c) He should have a good record of administrative ability.

(d) He should have requisite training as to enable him to give due respect and consideration to the opinion of non-official co-operators in development of the movement.

(b) can be deflected downwards or both downwards and to the left by the driver in such manner as to render it incapable of dazzling any such person in the circumstances aforesaid; or

(c) can be extinguished by the operation of a device which at the same time causes a beam of light to be emitted from the lamp which complies with clause (a); or

(d) can be extinguished by the operation of a device which at the same time either deflects the beam of light from another lamp downwards or both downwards and to the left in such manner as to render it incapable of dazzling any such person in the circumstances aforesaid, or brings into or leaves in operation a lamp or lamps which complies or comply with clause (a).

Provided further that, where means of operation are provided in addition to those prescribed by this rule, such additional means of operation may be disregarded for the purposes of this sub-rule.

(g) One at least of the means of operation shall be capable of causing brakes to be applied directly and not through the transmission gear to all the wheels of the vehicle:

Provided that, in the case of a motor vehicle registered in India before the first day of April 1940, it shall be deemed to be a sufficient compliance with this sub-rule if one of the means of operation applies brakes directly and not through the transmission gear to not less than two of the wheels of the vehicle:

Provided further that where a motor vehicle has more than four wheels and the drive is transmitted to all wheels other than the steering wheels without the interposition of a differential driving gear or similar mechanism between the axles carrying the driving wheels, it shall be deemed to be a sufficient compliance with this sub-rule if the brakes applied by one means of operation act directly on two driving wheels on opposite sides of the vehicle add the brakes applied by the other means of operation act directly on all other driving wheels.

(ii) in the case of a motor vehicle propelled by steam and not used as a public service vehicle, the engine shall be deemed to be an efficient braking system with one means of operation if the engine is capable of being reversed and is incapable of being disconnected from any of the driving wheels of the vehicle except by the sustained action of the driver.

(i) Every locomotive shall have an efficient braking system, the brakes of which act upon all the wheels of the locomotive other than the steering wheels, provided that this provision shall not apply to a locomotive registered in India before the first day of April 1940, if the locomotive is propelled by steam and the engine thereof is capable of being reversed.

(j) The braking system operated by one of the means of operation shall, according to whether the vehicle is laden or unladen, be capable of bringing it to rest when travelling at the speed specified in the table below within the distance therein specified when, at the time of the application of the brakes, the vehicle is travelling over a hard, dry, level road in good condition, with top gear and clutch engaged, or when, in the same conditions, the efficiency of the brakes as determined by a brake-testing meter approved by the Provincial Government is not less than 30 per cent. when the vehicle is laden and not less than 40 per cent. when the vehicle is unladen.

198. Dangerous substances—restrictions as to carriage of.—(a) Except for the fuel and lubricants necessary for the use of the vehicle, no explosive, highly inflammable or otherwise dangerous substance shall be carried on any public service vehicle unless it is so packed that, even in the case of an accident to the vehicle, it is unlikely to cause damage or injury to the vehicle or persons carried thereon.

(b) If, in the opinion of a police officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector or an Inspector of motor vehicles, any public service vehicle is at any time loaded in contravention of this rule, he may order the driver or other person in charge of the motor vehicle to remove or repack the inflammable or dangerous substance.

202. Use of lamps when a vehicle is at rest.—(a) If, within the limits of any municipality or cantonment, a motor vehicle is at rest within the hours during which lights are required, at the left-hand side of any road or street or elsewhere in any duly appointed parking place, it shall not be necessary for the motor vehicle to exhibit any light save as may be required generally or specifically by the District Magistrate.

NOTES ON FORM P. ST. P. PART B.—The form has been filled in in italics to illustrate its use as follows :—

3. Route.—AMB are the code letters of the Region of the Authority issuing the permit. DL are the code letters of a region (Delhi) to which the permit has been extended by the issuing authority under rule 71—it happens that the illustration taken is of the doubtful case of the second region being outside the Province of the original Authority. The route is from Panipat to Delhi with the branch route to Bhagpat Ferry.

4. Date of expiry.—A limit of one year for extra-regional validity is proposed, hence separate entries.

5. Conditions.—Code letters, or abbreviations, are suggested—thus—

GS. : Goods may be carried in the vehicle solely.

GA : Goods may be carried in addition to passengers, but (10) seats must always be kept available for passengers. Goods may not be carried either solely or in addition to passengers in Delhi.

TT. : A time-table must be exhibited and observed.

FT. : A fare-table must be exhibited and observed.

F. max.....min.....pies : The meaning is clear.

PL. 20 lbs. ; Not more than 20 lbs. of personal luggage allowed to each passenger.

The idea is that these code letters (GA, GS, TT, FT, F. max..... min.....pies, PL.....lbs.) shall always be printed on the form and be completed or struck out as required.

6. Special conditions.—The permit Part A is assumed to have provided that the bus must not ply in the municipal limits of Delhi, i.e., it must not pick up passengers within those limits unless for a destination outside.

Renewal.—By the time of renewal, Delhi has agreed to the bus carrying goods subject to ten seats being kept. Under rule 79, the countersignature previously granted by the Meerut Authority in the U. P. is also renewed.

Countersignature.—The Meerut Authority, in countersigning the permit, has varied the conditions and does not allow goods to be carried at all.

It seems that all necessary information can be fitted into Part B to foolscap size, Part A being more detailed. But if the regions are of reasonable size the questions of giving a permit of this sort extra-regional validity or of countersignature will not be important.
